

Haiti - Hospitals

Our CURE Clinic trip of 22 to 30 April 2017 was to provide four clinics in support of local hospitals in Haiti. So we visited those hospitals. They had already received equipment and supplies from previous container shipments. We discovered that one container, including an ambulance, was still in the harbor area of Port-au-Prince, undelivered because of some red tape issue. So we could not see the results of that shipment.

Our first visit, on Sunday, 23 April, was to the hospital in the center of Belladere. It was closed except for the care of some needy patients that were already admitted. We were given a detailed tour.

entrance

record keeping room

emergency room

intensive care - women intensive care - men sticker on that bed - Project CURE and Food for the Hungry radiology

families of intensive care patients child burn victim in isolation tent

CURE sticker (red) in maternity ward maternity ward, groans from left rear next room, ready for use surgery

surgery and CURE sticker (red) lab, awaiting supplies in stalled container exam room and CURE sticker entrance room on Tuesday morning hallway on Tuesday morning

Tuesday morning, Julie and I returned to the hospital. She gave an hour lecture to the staff about reducing the spread of diseases, through careful cleanliness, for tuberculosis and cholera.

satellite view of Mirebalais hospital

Many individuals and organizations contributed to the building of the modern (post-earthquake) Partners in Health hospital on the west side of Mirebalais. After a registration fee, all treatments are free. This is also a teaching hospital, for training Haitians in the various health tasks. We visited mid-day on Wednesday, 26 April.

donation list for hospital

This wall stands in grateful recognition of the many generous contributors who enabled Partners In Health/Zanmi Lasante to design, build, and equip Mirebalais National Teaching Hospital. This hospital represents an innovative public/private partnership with the Government of Haiti and a shared commitment to a future where all Haitians have access to high-quality medical care. We are extremely grateful to the individuals, companies, and foundations listed here who have made this vision possible, as well as to the countless others who donated to our relief and rebuilding efforts following the 2010 Haiti earthquake. We are also grateful to the many skilled trades people and project managers who donated their time and expertise to this project, and to the laborers, many from the community of Mirebalais, who worked tirelessly to build this hospital so quickly and so well. We sincerely appreciate the partnership of the Government of Haiti and its district delegate; the Mayoral Commission of Mirebalais; the Ministry of Public Health and Population; and the Mirebalais community.

Haiti scenes, metal artwork waiting in entrance

recovery room

emergency room patients, auto victims babies

our team in interior hallway bad smell in morgue cold room

On Saturday, 29 April, we visited a clinic in Port-au-Prince that serves people living in the Cite Soleil slums. It is operated by a Korean mission group. The local medical doctor served with us at the two clinics in Nordette.

clinic entrance on second floor pharmacy

dentistry

more supplies on shelf, Doctor in front.

The "lab" was a narrow storage closet.

These photos from our week in Haiti show the great range of medical facilities. Needs are great. Project C.U.R.E. is pleased to have helped meet those needs through container shipments and partnerships for many years.

Dr. Ed Holroyd
9 May 2017